Introduction. We chose this topic for research, because this information is valuable for students, teachers and professionals at pharmaceutical industry and people interested in pharmacy. In this work we collected and processed actual slang expressions in English pharmaceutical industry.

Purpose. To research English slang expressions used in pharmaceutical area, which will be useful for Ukrainian specialists, students, teachers to work with English speakers in this area as well as in the everyday life of an average person; to analyze the expediency of using lexical, morphological, syntactic concept according to communicative intent.

Research Methods. Identifying the slang expressions that can create difficulty in working with English sources of information; studying the relevant literature; systematizing of the information received.

Results and discussion. We created a certain base of slang expressions that make difficulties in their understanding for professionals, students and teachers of pharmaceutical industry today, provided full adequate and literal translations. Having processed English slang expressions and terms that used in the pharmaceutical industry, we have categorized them into 4 sections: pharmacy terms, common reimbursement terms, symbols used in pharmacology, polite slang. The first group unites expressions that can be used in pharmacy management, for example, “5 Percent Rule”, “Scope of Practice” or during work with drugs and medications, such as “Generic Drug” “goof balls”, “thrill pills”, “wild geronimos”, “peppills”. The second group is a collection of abbreviations that refer to financial field, namely, to reimbursements. The third unit explains meaning and difference between symbols in pharmacology. And the last group of terms we can notice at any speech, journal, books, but all refer to health and as a result to pharmacy industry. We find it important to use right translation of these terms for foreigners. We named this group “Polite slang” and it includes next expressions: “Unable to give birth” instead of “Infertile” or “Cerebrally challenged” instead of “Stupid” etc.

Conclusion. These slang terms and markings will be useful for Ukrainian-speaking specialists, students, teachers in working with English speakers. Slang is very common in English and the knowing of it (even without using in speech) is essential for understanding of English pharmacy workers, medical students, university students and teachers. Such slang expressions translation understanding can help you to understand the information correctly. And this, in turn, will help development Ukrainian science and education in general.
